No. 70.

THE STATE BUILDERS.

That section (the Tuolumne plains,) typifies Oregon more accurately than any other portion of the state I have visited. Its early settlers were men who toiled across the plains in the long and weary march that will never be repeated. Hardship disciplined them into fit and worthy founders of a great state, and severe toil taught them the value of money. Educating their sons as best they could, at the cost of a personal sacrifice, they lived to see them grown up to useful lives and forming a powerful element in the state's progress. The bench and bar of the metropolis teems with the scions of men who, thirty years ago, bore into this deep solitude the ax in one hand and the bible in the other.

Out of this severe school of adversity sprung a rugged element of men fit to cope with any other race in the battle of life. The discipline of poverty that reared Garfield from the canal boat to the presidency, will in the future elevate to high honors young men who have toiled up the same arduous path from obscurity and penury to wealth and power. The long, cold rainy winters that witnessed the hard struggles of the men who lived on salt salmon and cracked wheat for seven years, developed a high order of energy and personal courage.

The last three centuries show that nearly all the master minds of the world come from the upper temperate zone; and the vigor of the northern brain to-day gives new vigor to the tired and languid world. The Italy that gave to the world a Galileo and a Columbus, has failed to produce their duplicates. In the mean time, the Gallic races have sprung to the fore and, by their progress in the coarser arts, have advanced the world as the brush of Titian or the chisel of Praxiteles never could have done.

California is semi-tropical in her climate. Oregon has none of it. She has the humid air of England and her sons and daughters have the look of transplanted Englishmen. The future years of her power in the list of great producing states, will see a race of lusty men spring from this very cradle of early hardship, leading every enterprise conducive to the development of our country and the enlightenment of her people, realizing the wisdom of the old Latin maxim, "A sound mind in a sound body." The discipline of poverty in the early fifties will be manifest in the prosperity which witnesses the close of the present century in Oregon.—Oregonian.

The Plague of House Flies.

Some paper in Oregon notices the fact that so far this year there have been no house flies to bother, and that it is premonition of sickness or epidemics. These torments are scavengers and no doubt that without them in the economy of nature we would suffer. We have sometimes heard the question asked as to where the fly comes from, and how propagated. For our own satisfaction we have investigated it and give it to our readers: The eggs are about four-hundredths of an inch long, one-fourth as wide, dull in white color, and pitted with elongate, hexagonal depressions—mere whitish specks to the unaided eye, laid in little agglutinated piles in warm nature or in decomposing vegetation, especially about our stables and barn yards. From 80 to 100 are laid at a time, and probably at three to four different intervals by the same fly, though on this point we have no exact data. Within 24 hours, in summer, they hatch into footless maggots, which, after rioting in the filth till their tender skins seem ready to burst from repletion become full-fed in less than a week, and descending into the earth or sheltering under some old board, contract to brown, shining objects, rounded at both ends and technically known as puparia. Within the darkness of this harden skin profound changes rapidly take place, and the insect passes through the pupa to the perfect state, and finally, in about five days, the anterior end of the puparium is pushed off, and the fly quickly crawls out. At first its parts are pale and soft, and its wings are crumpled and useless, but these soon expand, and suddenly, without practice or teaching, the new-fledged fly wings its way to your table to mock your displeasure—to share your repast. The length of time from the hatching to maturity varies with the season and temperature, but will not exceed ten days in midsummer, while the life of the perfect fly lasts about three weeks at the same season. As cold weather approaches propagation ceases and the older flies perish. A few of the more vigorous females, however, rear to some nook or cranny where, in a state of torpor, they survive until the ensuing season—links 'twixt the summer gone by and to come.

South Carolina Sand Hills.

A few miles from Columbia is a section called the Sand Hills. The country is a barren waste, growing nothing but pine, scrub oak, blackberries and other natural growth. The inhabitants, as a general thing, are indolent and dissolute, with not a particle of "school larin." Some of our best citizens have moved from these Sand Hills into Columbia, become persons and made their mark, but the immovable inhabitants are as above described. The women generally wear scant clothing and the children ditto, while the men are always shabby, and nothing so delights them as a jug of corn whisky and a plug of tobacco.

Some of them present the appearance of clay-enters. In winter they bring for ten miles or more, what they call loads of oak or pine wood into the Columbia market, drawn by a skin-tight, bone-protruding calf or steer, on a wagon with two wheels. The animal, wagon, wood and driver can be carried almost on his shoulders by one of our ordinary darkeys. During the cold weather they beg a good deal, but when the summer comes these people, in their rags, with whisky in their heads, and tobacco in their mouths, are as independent as a candidate for office after his election. Blackberries and other fruit of wild growth they flood the market with, and they then reap the cash, and are as saucy as they make them.—Chicago Times.

Dandruff.

What is it, indeed? Is it a disease? Is it curable? No, no, no! It is an evidence of a healthy scalp, and as to its cure you might as well attempt to stop your toe nails from growing. It is simply nature's mode of removing the scurf skin all over the body, and the reason why it is not shown on other parts is that the friction of clothing removes it as fast as it loosens, while the hair of the head, if not often brushed or combed, or washed, prevents its escape.

Now, if you have any doubts as to the truth of what I have asserted, rub the inside of your lower limbs smartly with a black cloth, and you have rubbed off a fine white powder which is the same material as the dandruff on your scalp, only more finely pulverized. I will offset my advice against the barber's. Mine is: Brush the hair every day, comb thoroughly with comb at least once a week, and wash the whole head in soft water as often as possible. You may put a little soap or soda in the water, but I wouldn't. Do not invest in any of the so-called dandruff cures, but save your dollar to pay for a newspaper and read it.

Not "Good Enough For Oregon."

Talking about the Hillsboro fair the day has gone by, when a man can say of a horse that he is "good enough for Oregon." We have a smaller population than California, but we have begun breeding from a greater diversity of sires and will soon reap the benefit of varied experiments. California has two sons of Almont standing for service within her boundaries while Oregon has seven. And while California has undoubtedly surpassed us in track trotting, we excel her in the production of farm horses and animals for draying and teaming purposes. As yet none of our breeders have begun to breed especially for coaching purposes, but there is already a demand for carriage horses and the growth of our city will cause prices to advance rather than decline in that line of animals. Again, the country is depleted of beef cattle and the drovers of Kansas and Colorado who make their annual trips across the great plains between the Dalles and Cheyenne will purchase horses hereafter for the markets of the great eastern cities. Lands east of the Mississippi are becoming too valuable for pasturage purposes and dealers in working stock must look to Oregon hereafter, for their supply of farm and ordinary horses. Hence there is big money in breeding carriage stock. The programme at Hillsboro is very attractive and is the most liberal bill ever put forth at any town of its size on the Pacific coast.

James F. Brown, justice of the peace Dallas precinct, says the Hemizer, was found in his bed on Thursday morning in an unconscious condition, and died soon after, notwithstanding vigorous efforts were made by Dr. J. N. Smith to resuscitate him.

Are you disturbed at night and broken of your rest by a sick child suffering and crying with the excruciating pain of cutting teeth? If so, go at once and get a bottle of Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup. It will relieve the poor little sufferer immediately—depend on it; there is no other remedy. It is no more a mother on earth who has ever used it, who will not tell you at once that it will regulate the bowels, and give rest to the mother, and relief and health to the child, operating like magic. It is perfectly safe to use in all cases, and pleasant to the taste, and is the prescription of one of the oldest and best female physicians in the United States. Sold everywhere, 25 cents a bottle.

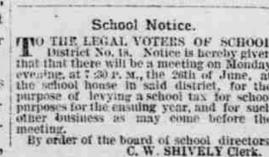

HAIR'S VEGETABLE SCLIMAX HAIR RESTORER is a scientific combination of some of the most powerful restorative agents in the vegetable kingdom. It restores gray hair to its original color. It makes the scalp white and clean, cures dandruff and humors, and falling out of the hair. It furnishes the nutritive principle by which the hair is nourished and supported. It makes the hair moist, soft and glossy, and is unsurpassed as a hair dressing. It is the most economical preparation ever offered to the public, as its effects remain a long time, making only an occasional application necessary. It is recommended and used by eminent medical men, and officially endorsed by the State Assayer of Massachusetts. The popularity of Hair's Restorer has increased with the test of many years, both in this country and in foreign lands, and it is now known and used in all the civilized countries of the world.

FOR SALE BY ALL DEALERS.

Peruvia Bitters

The Count Cincion was the Spanish Viceroy in Peru in 1630. The Countess, his wife, was prostrated by an intermittent fever, from which she was freed by the use of the native remedy, the Peruvian bark, or, as it was called in the language of the country, "Quinaquina." Grateful for her recovery, on her return to Europe in 1632, she introduced the remedy in Spain, where it was known under various names, until Lamenue called it Cincion, in honor of the lady who had brought them that which was more precious than the gold of the Incas. To this day, after a lapse of two hundred and fifty years, science has given us nothing to take its place. It effectually cures a morbid appetite for stimulants, by restoring the natural tone of the stomach. It attacks excessive love of liquor as it does a fever, and destroys both alike. The powerful tonic virtue of the Cincion is preserved in the Peruvia Bitters, which are as effective against malarial fever to-day as they were in the days of the old Spanish Viceroys. We guarantee the ingredients of these bitters to be absolutely pure, and of the best known quality. A trial will satisfy you that this is the best bitter in the world. "The proof of the pudding is in the eating," and we willingly abide this test. For sale by all druggists, grocers and liquor dealers. Order it. Loeb & Co., agents for Astoria.

The Peruvia Bitters has cured those who were suffering from dyspepsia, indigestion, liver complaint, biliousness, female complaints, etc. Pains free to any address. Seth W. Fowler & Son—Boston.
